Simmons Firm shareholder Chris Guinn has dedicated his practice to representing victims of mesothelioma and other asbestos-related diseases.

A former linguist for the United States Air Force, Chris has a thorough understanding of the historical and medical aspects of asbestos litigation and works closely with families affected by mesothelioma throughout the country, no matter their location.

Since 2004, Chris has represented well over 100 clients in nearly half the states of the union, recovering nearly $150 million on their behalf.

Chris is also involved with the firm's Pro Bono program, providing free legal services to military veterans. He also works with the firm's Guardian Ad Litem program, offering free representation to minors and disabled adults.

Chris graduated from Saint Louis University School of Law in 2002. Prior to joining the Simmons Firm, he was an assistant prosecuting attorney in St. Louis County, Missouri.
