

Currently Accepting NEC Baby Formula Case Referrals Nationwide

If a case involving a baby developing necrotizing enterocolitis (NEC), a serious, potentially fatal gastrointestinal disease crosses your desk, we hope you'll think of us. Simmons Hanly Conroy has the experience and resources necessary to hold negligent companies accountable and fight for justice on behalf of your clients.

Baby formula and milk fortifier products that are made with cow's milk can put infants — particularly low-birth-weight and preterm infants — at risk of NEC. This includes certain products by popular baby formula brands Enfamil™ and Similac®.

Despite the growing body of evidence that establishes this risk, however, there have been no Enfamil, Similac or cow's milk-based baby formula recalls at this time. To seek justice, many families across the country have turned to filing NEC lawsuits.
